—Use the Classified Ads in The Herald.

—Just 19 days until Christmas.

—“Now that we have the models and the price, how soon can we get deliveries?” is the popular question at the Ford agencies.

—The observing reporter of The Circleville Herald saw his first load of Christmas trees Sunday in this city. They were “roped” on the back of a flivver parked on Court street.

—How about those Christmas trees for downtown streets? They’d look nice again this year and would help to embellish the stores which are busy now with the yuletide trade.

—This Christmas Savings club is a great idea. If you haven’t opened up an account yet in a Circleville bank, it would pay you to investigate and do it now.

—We have heard of persons dropping something “too hot to handle” and have had some personal experience, but grabbing a charged electric wire is something else again.

—For a cent a word you can tell your story in the classified column of this paper, and people in over 3,000 homes in Circleville and Pickaway county will see what you are saying.

—Better visit the Circleville stores now. Don’t take our word for it but drop in on the merchants and see what a wonderful array of Christmas gifts they have for the shopper.

—All right, kiddies, send your Santa Claus letters to The Circleville Herald and this newspaper will see that they are forwarded to Santa at the North Pole. Do it now, so he’ll know what you want for Christmas.

—Use the classified ads in The Circleville Herald. A cent a word tells your story and may mean big money to you. Telephone your ad to 782 or bring it in, cash in advance, and you’ll be surprised at the results it will bring you.

—Government statistics show there are an average of four to a home. There are over 3,000 “Heralds” going into Circleville and Pickaway county homes daily. That means the advertiser has a potential list of around 12,000 readers. Think it over.

—A fire on the hearth and a candle in the window have long been a symbol of peaceful, happy Yuletide. A family gathered about its own fireside expresses the spirit of Christmas, joyously and amiably. Let’s all make an effort to be members of that family circleville this Christmas.

—The discussion over the Twin Elms, located south of South Bloomfield on State Route 23, goes on. These 700 year old elms can be saved according to Professor N. W. Shearer, forestry expert of the college of agriculture, at Ohio State University, after examining the trees which the state highway department indicates are doomed to be cut down. He says one thousand dollars could be spent in treating the trees and they would stand the wear of time for years.

SENATE BATTLE LOOMING OVER SMITH AND VARE

Conflict Over Seating Two New Members of Upper House Expected At Outset.

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—A precedent-shattering political battle confronted the newly convening senate today over the efforts of Senators-elect Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, and William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, to occupy the senatorial seats they won in the 1926 election.

The two senators-elect faced a hostile senate, eager to bar the door in their faces because of slush fund charges. An International News Service poll has shown that a clean majority of the senate opposes seating either Newcomer. As a result, they may be barred at the door or denied their seats and excluded later.

Procedure in Doubt.

Leaders of the Democratic-insurgent coalition, opposing the seating of both men, were undecided this morning over their method of procedure. One group desired to bar both Smith and Vare without further delay, basing their action on the reports of the Reed Slush Fund committee that huge sums were spent in their behalf at the primaries last fall. A second group suggested both men be given a new hearing before a senate committee, with further division of opinion over which committee should conduct the inquiry.

Administration leaders meanwhile sought to patch up a truce until tomorrow afternoon, so that the senate can be organized today and President Coolidge can deliver his message to congress tomorrow.

There was no definite assurance of an armistice, as a single objection, under the senate’s rules, can block the transaction of all other business until after both the Smith and Vare cases are settled.

To Be Challenged.

Regardless of which ouster plan is followed, it was considered certain that neither Smith nor Vare would be allowed to take their oath of office today. The opposition unanimously agreed on a plan to challenge both men as soon as Vice President Dawes attempts to swear them into office.

Thereafter, a truce may be declared until tomorrow, the senate organized and President Coolidge invited to address congress. One objection however can start immediate hostilities over seating both men.

FOREST FIRE RAGES

Hundreds of Acres are Swept by Flames.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 5.—(UP)—One forest fire raged uncontrolled in southern California early today after fire fighters had brought under control another blaze which caused damage estimated at more than $2,000,000.

About 1,000 men battled flames in the San Bernardino region which threatened hundreds of acres of forest land and many homes.

Shortly before midnight, 1,500 volunteers and drafted men conquered a blaze in Tuna and Tujunga canyons after it had burned over 8,000 acres and destroyed more than 100 residences. The fire still was burning after the 30-hour battle, but seemed to be under control.

The San Bernardino blaze had burned over more than 5,000 acres of valuable timberland. Scores of mountain cabins were destroyed but no lives were lost, reports indicated.

SEETHING WITH POLITICS, NEW CONGRESS HERE

Insurgents Strike Dominant Note As National Legislative Body Starts Session.

BY GEORGE R. HOLMES
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—Boiling with insurgency and seething with politics, big and little, the new seventieth congress met here today for a tempestuous six hours session that will run straight into the national conventions next June.

Uncertainty and uneasiness filled the air as the session got under way, for not even the so-called leaders cared to predict with any degree of confidence just what may come out of this session.

All the elements that contribute to a cantankerous and boisterous session are present. This congress may be the incubator that will hatch the next president. The session is about evenly divided, and the tit-for-tat rather than actual.

Have Slim Margins. In the senate, the Republicans have a slim majority of one vote; the House is 48 Republicans, 47 Democrats and 1 Farmer-Labor. In the house the Republicans are a little better situated, but their control is precarious at best; the line-up is 236 Republicans, 196 Democrats, 3 Farmer-Labor and 1 Socialist. But in the house as in the senate, there is a small but determined group of Independents, mostly representing the disgruntled grain belt, who may bolt party lines at any time and knock calculations and plans forty ways from the well known Jack.

It is improbable, however, that the session will produce any vast amount of legislation to add to the already over-burdened statute books. Sessions convening on the eve of presidential elections rarely do. Neither do sessions wherein the parties are about evenly divided—the membership cannot spare time from fighting to perform the groundwork that must nurture a constructive program.

Taxes to Be Reduced.

Taxes will be reduced from $225,000,000 to $250,000,000, the navy will be strengthened, some sort of a farm relief bill may be pushed through, a measure of relief will be furnished to the hard-hit flood sufferers in the lower Mississippi Valley, and the usual appropriation bill will be passed—but beyond that the leaders say nothing. Speculation is a hazardous business in a congress so split by factions and so ridden by blocs as the seventieth.

The danger of an insurgent Republican revolt was present. The insurgent bloc demanded written assurances from the Republican leader several days ago that an opportunity be afforded to vote on three measures—A farm bill embodying the McNary-Haugen principles, an Anti-Labor injunction bill, and upon a resolution for investigation of the Coolidge-Kellogg policy in Latin America, this last involving the American-Nicaraguan “war” which has sent thousands of marines into that republic.

Demand Is Made.

The insurgents demanded an opportunity to vote on these as the price for their helping the Republicans retain control of senate offices. Senator Curtis, the Republican leader had not replied “satisfactorily” this morning and the insurgents were miffed.

EXPLODING CAN OF OIL CAUSES SEVERE HURTS

Child Assisting Mother In Getting Breakfast, Is Caught In Kitchen Blast.

Goldie Hamp, thirteen year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hamp, of North Pickaway street, was burned probably fatally at 7:25 o’clock Monday morning, when an oil can from which she was replenishing the fuel in the cook stove exploded in the kitchen of the home.

The explosion occurred when the girl attempted to fill the container of the stove while one of the burners was lighted. It is believed the fire was transmitted to the can through the fumes of the fuel.

Assisting Mother

The child was assisting her mother in the preparation of breakfast at the time. After the explosion the girl was enveloped in flames and before her mother could tear the clothing from her body, she was burned severely from chin to her knees.

Mrs. Hamp was burned about the hands in attempting to beat out the fire in her daughter’s clothing. The girl was taken to Mt. Carmel hospital Monday afternoon in the W. H. Albaugh company ambulance after she had been attended at her home by Dr. D. V. Courtwright, Mrs. John Mader and Mrs. Lawrence Goeller. It is feared the burns will prove fatal, and that pneumonia also might develop.

Alarm Answered.

The Hamp family resides in the H. P. Folsom property on North Pickaway street and the father is straw room foreman at the Mid-West Box company. The fire department answered the alarm, turned in from box 16, but the explosion caused no damage to the kitchen of the house.

FARMERS START MISS WEILL IS DAY MEETING STRUCK BY AUTO

Year’s Program For American Agriculture To Be Outlined At Convention.

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—(UP)—Farmers of America gathered at the American Farm Bureau federation convention here today to mould the legislative program of agriculture for the coming year.

Delegates from more than 40 states, including 31 state federation presidents, attended. The convention considers practically every phase of rural life.

The program for the three-day meet includes speeches by leading or political, educational and military thought as well as talks by “plain farmers.”

S. H. Thompson, president of the federation, addressed the convention shortly after it was officially convened. He made his report for the past year.

Substantiating his contention by citing figures of the department of agriculture, Thompson told the delegates economic conditions in agriculture were more unfavorable than in any other industry.

He scored the failure of congress to enact legislation to relieve the farmers’ ills, but warned against enactment of price-fixing or government subsidy laws.

Circleville Woman Is Injured Badly When Run Down By “Hit-skip” Driver.

Miss Bertha O. Weill was injured badly Saturday evening, while crossing East Main street at Pickaway street, when an automobile eastbound on Main street struck her she was knocked down and thrown a considerable distance.

Two young men who were repairing a machine parked in front of the Methodist church, head the woman scream, and ran to her assistance. They carried her to the office of Dr. George W. Heffner. She was removed later to her home, 129 East High street.

Miss Weill’s injuries consist of a cut above the left eye, bruised left hand and left knee. Her condition Monday morning was reported favorable and if no complications set in, she will recover.

In speaking of the accident, Miss Weill said that she came down to the library and left there to go to Funk’s grocery located on North Pickaway street. She had crossed Pickaway street and had stepped from the curb to the street when she was hit by a car. The car had no headlights, and after hitting her, never stopped.

It is thought that the car that hit Miss Weill, was the Chevrolet coupe that was stolen from in front of George Littleton’s tailor shop and later was found abandoned in an alley by the police department. The car was owned by Charles A. Christy of 118 West Mill street.

Harry E. Weill, a brother of Miss Weill, wishes to thank the two young men and Mrs. B. T. Hedges who so kindly looked after, and cared for his sister and assisted her in reaching the office of Dr. Heffner.

EXPLAINS TASTE OF WATER HERE

Utilities Company Says Too Much Chlorine Has Been Used In Purification.

Undoubtedly you've noticed that peculiar taste the city water has had for the past few days.

Like everything else, there's a reason.

The water has been denatured to such an extent that it does not taste good and its odor is unbearable. The condition has been brought about by an overdose of chlorine to clear the water of mud and impurities brought in by the recent high water and flood conditions.

City health officer, Louis Schneider, has sent a container to the state board of health for examination, and in the meantime, it is advisable to boil all drinking water.

City solicitor C. A. Weldon had a talk with J. E. Munger, state director of health, and he has promised to send an expert from his department to this city today and make an examination.

The Public Utilities Company of Ohio, which owns the water company here, has also promised to send an expert here, and look into the trouble. It is said that the mixing machine used at the works is out of commission, since the recent flooding of the river, and that the ingredients used to clear the water has to be placed in the water by hand, and that is one of the reasons for the trouble.

Whatever the trouble is, it should be eradicated, as it is a menace to the health of the public.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

JARDINE SEES BETTER TIMES FOR FARMERS

Annual Report of Agricultural Secretary Sounds Optimistic Note.

By JOSEPH S. WASNEY
U. P. Staff Correspondent.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—Better times for farmers were predicted by Secretary of Agriculture Jardine in his annual report.

Pointing out that the farmer's dollar now has a buying power only eight per cent below pre-war index level, Jardine outlined specific ideas for continuing improvement of the farmer's lot.

The favored extension of co-operative marketing, urging a statute for large farm business organizations, owned and controlled by farmers and managed by strong executives chosen by the producers.

He opposed government participation in farm business, and especially opposed government price fixing.

Favors Federal Board.

He favored a federal farm board, to protect both farmers' and the public's interests; and advocated long term mortgage credits for farmers.

The states, he said, could aid materially in putting agriculture on a firmer basis by correcting certain banking, taxation, and public expenditure practices. In this connection, he noted that many sections are "over banked," this leading to bank failures and consequent bankruptcy for some farmers.

He advised against a change in present tariffs and counseled alterations to relieve the agriculturist of some onerous tax burdens.

Jardine also emphasized that aid, other than financing, could be given the farmer so his net income would increase. Public agencies, for instance, could co-operate with the farmer to achieve a better balance between production and demand.

Urges Less Waste.

"Efforts should be made," he said, "to diminish waste, to lessen margins between producers' and consumers' prices, to reduce transportation and distribution costs, and to lessen the farmers' overhead charges by lowering or redistributing tax burdens by improving agriculture credit facilities. Farmers should be encouraged to enhance their bargaining power through co-operative marketing and the responsibility of the public in helping to reduce price fluctuations due to unavoidable gluts and shortages of agriculture products should be recognized in a practical manner."

"Concerning cotton," Jardine said, "from the standpoint of price, the improvement has been remarkable and it is estimated should cotton continue at the present level, returns to farmers for lint alone will exceed by about $150,000,000 the income from last year's crop."

No marked scarcity exists in any product, he said, due to good balancing of crops. Moreover, he noted a marked increase of efficiency among farmers who now make a greater production with a smaller farm population.

Look in the Bible

Martha, aged five, was visiting at her grandmother's who prides herself on correct pronunciation. One day while grandmother was away a neighbor dropped in. Martha attempted to entertain the visitor with bits of home affairs. She said: "Grandmother talks so funny; she says ap-ricots for a-pricots, so I just told her to go look in the Bible."

Gave Name to Garment

Bloomers received their name from Mrs. Amelia Jenks Bloomer, an American temperance and women's rights advocate. She edited a paper called the Liby in which she took up the idea of a reform in women's dress. The movement had been started by Mrs. Elizabeth Smith Miller. The name "bloomers" gradually became attached to any divided skirt or knickerbocker dress for women.

THE new Ford car has been on the market only a few days, but it has already created unusual interest throughout the country. Millions of people got the full details of it last week for the first time and were delighted with the story of its beauty, speed, comfort, safety and low price.

All day long and far into the night, great crowds gathered in hundreds of Ford salesrooms from Maine to Florida and from New York to San Francisco. Never has such interest been shown in a new car. Never has any new car so far exceeded expectations.

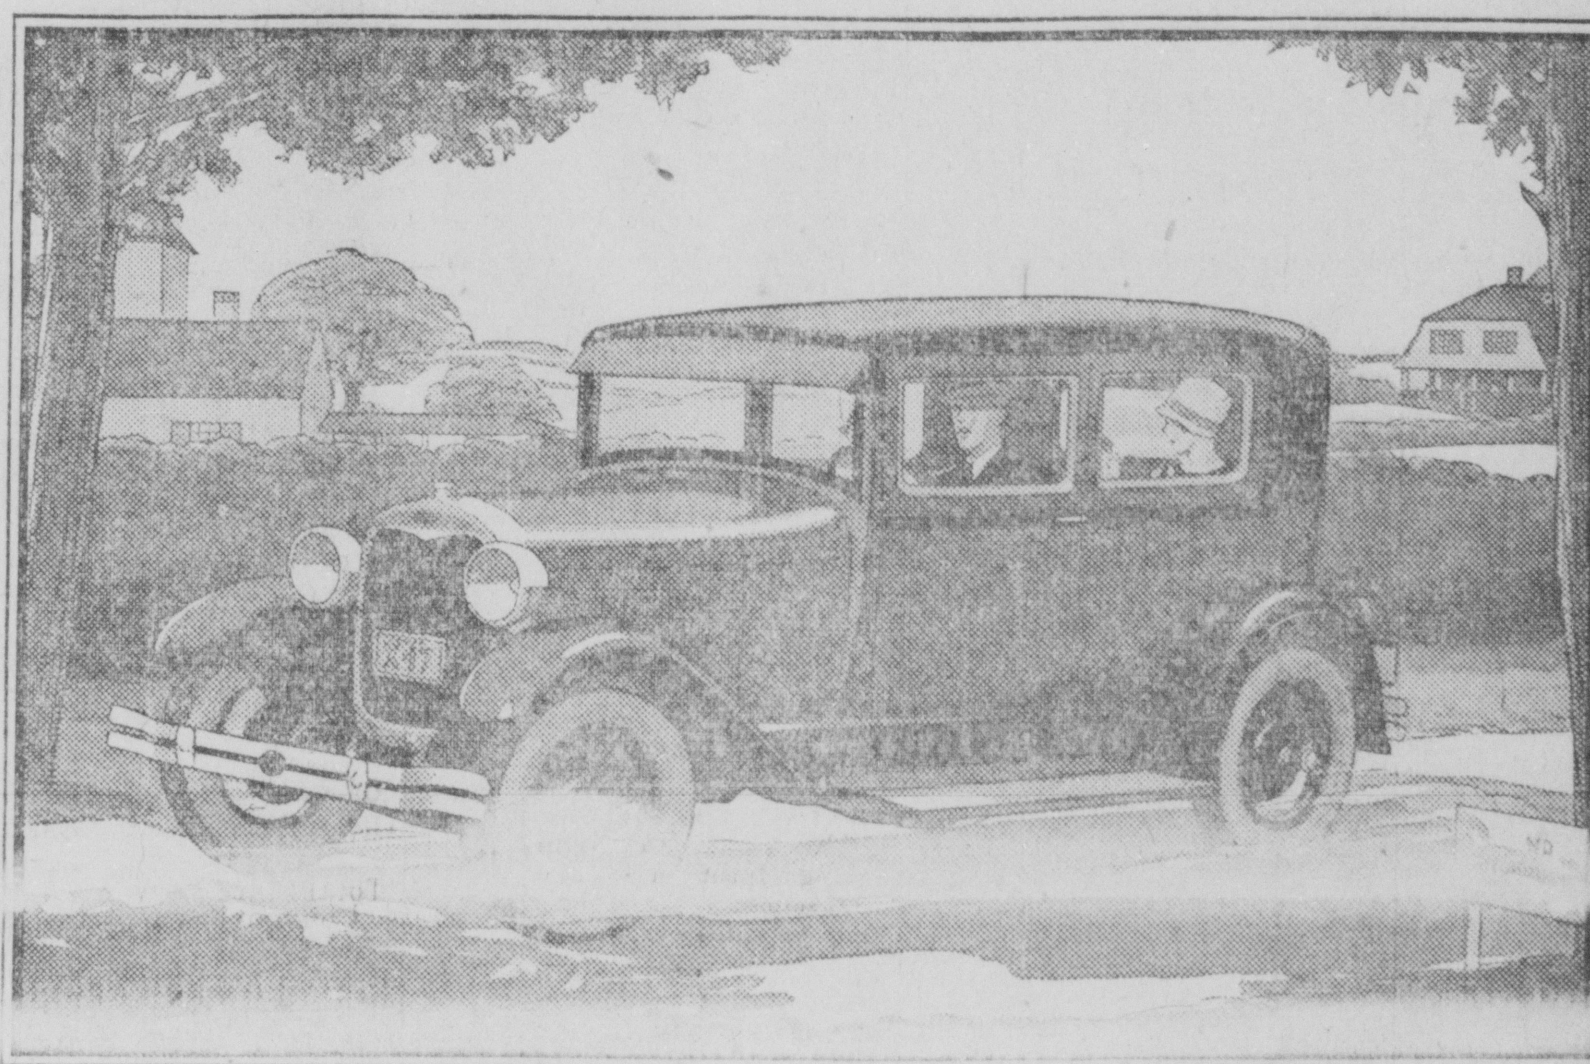

People knew that Ford was making a new car. They knew it was a good car. They had read announcements about it. But they had no idea it would be a car like this. Their quick appreciation of it is shown by the record-breaking sales.

Greatest day in the history of the automobile industry

Thousands upon thousands of orders for the new Ford car have been received since last Friday. These, and the advance orders placed with us by motorists even before the car was officially announced, will keep the entire Ford plant working day and night for weeks to come.

Such figures are a clear and unmistakable reflection of the value that has been built into the new Ford car. It is, without question, the outstanding purchase of all time in the light-car field.

car—ride in it—know the thrill of driving it easily and safely through thickest traffic or step it up to sixty and sixty-five on the open road, you cannot begin to appreciate the extent of the many mechanical improvements.

It is difficult to believe that so much speed, power, beauty, quiet, comfort and safety can be had at such a low price. It would be impossible if this new car were made by anyone but Ford.

Only Ford could sell such a fine car at such a low price

The low price of the new Ford car and its exceptional performance are the result of manufacturing practices and economies as unusual as the car itself. The new Ford is more than a new automobile. It is a new idea in modern, economical transportation.

By all means, take a little while today to learn about this new automobile. You will know that there is nothing quite like it anywhere in quality and price.

INDIVIDUALISTS OR PARTNERS?

THE QUESTION whether a community develops well or not, depends a good deal on the relation which its people feel they bear to that community. Are they just individualists, who are all pursuing their separate ways to entirely independent ends? Or do they look at themselves as partners and co-operators, in a joint enterprise of developing that community and giving it fine advantages?

In the early days of this country, people had to have that partnership and co-operative idea, or they could never get anything done. But as our communities have developed, and much that is fine and desirable is given us without effort on our part, some of us tend to lose that partnership spirit. We must recover it, if our communities are to go ahead in the future as they have in the past.

GOOD TEACHING

AN UP-TO-DATE, well equipped school building is a fine thing and shows educational progress. But is it not of less importance than the quality of teaching that is found inside?

The question has been raised by various persons recently. A college president, in his inaugural address, said that teaching ought to come before research and advanced study in a teacher's activities. It seemed a startling statement in view of the recent tendency to consider it a professor's duty to follow some line of individual research, to write books and do other scholarly things not directly connected with his pupils in the classroom.

The other day a leading educator, Prof. Robert J. Leonard of Columbia University, sounded the same note in reference to high schools.

"It seems to me that the great need in secondary education is to improve the quality of teaching," he said. "I believe that more will come from an attempt along this line than in discussing further the content of the curriculum."

"In only two instances in a wide survey of secondary schools has my attention been directed to the quality of the teaching, though great emphasis was placed on buildings and equipment."

"I was told by the president of an educational institution that his work there was completed when he had succeeded in paying off the college indebtedness and acquired new buildings and equipment. It would seem that he was just ready to begin his real work of education."

Here is encouragement for many thoughtful citizens who have regretted the great emphasis lately placed on school "frills and fads" to the detriment, as they felt, of sound education. The best of these frills and fads, the ones that have proved their educational usefulness, will remain, but the pendulum has begun to swing again in the direction of good teaching. That is a very hopeful sign.

THE THEORY OF DEMOCRACY.

PROF. PORTUS of the University of Sydney, Australia, in lecturing before Tufts College a few days ago, remarked that the theory of our forefathers was that democracy would work because people lived together in small communities. It was thought that people were thus familiar with the problems of the neighborhood. But now in our crowded urban conditions, people are not thus familiar with their neighborhood problems. Consequently many things go wrong.

Hence he remarked, we need some new kind of political education. To which it can be added, that the newspapers are constantly providing means of such education. If all the people can only be induced to read about public affairs in the newspapers, they will have that training for democracy which existed in the old days.

RELEASED PRISONERS

A MINISTER recently told a pitiful story of a man who was recently released from a prison, and who apparently was trying to find some honest work to do, but had not been able to. He said the people of his own racial origin would not have anything to do with him because of his jail record, while some of a different racial strain to whom he had applied were equally cold because of his race. He had only enough money to buy his food and lodging for a day or two.

There is no position much harder than that of the released prisoner who wants to make an honest try to go straight, but finds the world very suspicious. He ought to have help. If the prison authorities speak well of him and give their opinion that he is really trying to reform, he is entitled to a chance, and people should not be too hostile. Many men have come through this experience and have gone straight and live honored lives today.

CHRISTMAS TRADE.

IT IS TIME for people to be thinking about their Christmas and holiday purchases. We have it in our power here in Circleville to do an important stroke of business for our community, by buying our holiday and winter supplies at home. We are going to spend in the next few weeks a large sum of money for these purposes. If much of it is spent elsewhere, our local enterprises will feel the drag of this loss for months. If practically all of it is spent at home, a new wave of prosperity goes through our town. And there is no place where we can make the money go as far as in our home community.

ALLOTMENTS ASKED

Rivers and Harbors Needs Presented to Congress.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—United Press appropriations for rivers and harbors work amounting to $67,105,310 for the next fiscal year, an increase of about $6,500,000, were recommended to congress today in the annual report of Major General Edgar Jadwin, chief of army engineers.

In addition to his recommendation for the regular annuity of $10,000,000 for Mississippi River Flood Control, Jadwin said he would make separate recommendations "for a revision of the Mississippi Flood Control Project," which will "provide a federal program for solving the preplexing problem."

For muscle shoals dam No. 2, Tennessee river, the Jadwin report carries a $300,000 recommendation.

Suggested allotments that can be profitably expended during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1929, included Sandusky Harbor, Ohio, $622,000, or more each.

EVERYWHERE

What if a Chap
Got everything
He wanted?
I've wondered about
That more than Once when a dreamy
Mood possessed me—
Would he be happy
If he owned everything
And had nothing to Strive for?
I doubt it,
The world isn't like
That.
Men are not laggards
Like that—
It's dreaming and
Hoping and working
And praying
That makes each precious
Minute of the day
Interesting;
We hope and we hope
And now and then
Something comes
Our way
And then a new idea
Springs up
And we go after it
And pray some more—
But having all
Our desires filled?
Say! I don't Want it
And neither do
You—

And what we mean to say
Is,
Keep on a-wishing
And keep on a-hoping,
Because when you
Cease to covet
Desires you quit
Enjoying life,
And might as well
Be dead—
Satisfaction comes
In doing your Job right
Whether you achieve
Your fondest wish—
Or not—
Contentment is not
In possession,
But it is
In trying to achieve
Something that
You have set
Your heart and hopes
On.

It's not much fun in being successful unless you can make your worst enemy sore at you because you have won out.

We often wish, says Bob Ryder who is entitled to his wishes if nothing else, that the girl who is always having the full-length picture of her back in the paper, to show how a very few bottles of the sovereign remedy rid it of all skin blemishes, would have the picture of her front put in right alongside of it, to free us, if possible, from the haunting suspicion that perhaps the blemishes merely came out in some other place.

Bob, it seems to us, for his age, is getting entirely too ambitious and somehow we doubt really whether he's just doubtful or curious.

Josh Billings says he has figured onto it and find that civilization costs about 90 cents on the dollar.

Investigation of Public Utilities Biggest Problem Before Congress

National Legislature Not Faced With Orgy of Inquiries For First Time Since War—Army Housing, Latin-American Policy and Merchant Marine Also To Be Taken Up.

By KENNETH CLARK

L. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—For the first time since the war congress does not seem headed for an orgy of investigation.

There is but one inquiry on the horizon that seems likely to approach magnitude and sensational revelations the Teapot Dome, veterans' bureau, Department of Justice and corrupt elections investigation of recent years. It is the inquiry directed by Senator Walsh (D) of Montana into the "power trusts." Walsh, who unearthed the oil scandals, believes it may lead to startling ramifications.

Other investigations in the offing include army housing, navy efficiency, railroad consolidations, the administration's Latin-American policy and merchant marine. There are also certain to be some of lesser importance and scope.

Progressives Back Inquiry

The senate progressive bloc is solidly behind Walsh's inquiry. Senator Norris (R) of Nebraska, the insurgent leader, has spent months gathering data on the alleged efforts of the power and public utility interests to influence legislation and exploit for private gain the public power resources of the nation.

The object is two-fold: (1) to smash the "power lobby"; and (2) to provide governmental regulation of the power industry, along lines analogous to federal supervision of transportation.

Norris charged that the "power trust," spread all over the nation by the interlinking of public utility corporations, is blocking development of Boulder Dam and Muscle Shoals, and "is ready to gobble up the people's resources for private greed." He further alleged the "trust is setting up a super-government to dictate legislation."

Gifford Pinchot, ex-governor of Pennsylvania, a conservation leader for years, has come to Washington to aid in the "battle of the billions over control of the country's power."

The housing investigation is an upshot of President Coolidge's action in muzzling Major General Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff of the army. He described housing conditions as "disgraceful" and was recalled from a western speaking tour.

The Magruder Case

The navy is faced with a possible "Billy Mitchell episode" as result of the recall of Rear Admiral Thomas P. Magruder as commandant of the Philadelphia navy yard. Magruder was almost as outspoken as the ex-assistant army air service chief, and aroused the ire of his superiors. He said the navy administration was so wasteful that it was getting but one dollar's benefit out of every four dollars expended. This situation is expected to be aired by the "big navy bloc," which is insisting upon addition to the nation's sea power.

There is a growing demand for railroad consolidations. The interstate commerce commission is working on the subject. Previous congresses have held extensive hearings and this one will continue the work. The Progressives may also go into charges of the United Mine Workers of America that big railroads, including the Pennsylvania, Baltimore and Ohio and the New York Central, are engaged in an alleged "gigantic conspiracy to depress coal prices and beat down miners' wages." The president was asked to recommend this inquiry to congress.

Latin American Policy.

The administration's Latin-American policy has been subjected to sharp criticism during the summer from Progressive and Democrats in congress. While the situation has been relieved somewhat by the recent turn for the better in American-Mexican relations, there is still some disposition to give an airing to the Nicaraguan tangle. Progressive spokesmen believe that "big stick" policy in Nicaragua is arousing Central and South American republics against the United States. There will be a demand for recall of marines.

The merchant marine question is an old one with congress and appears as far from settlement as ever. President Coolidge opposes a direct subsidy to private shippers but favors some sort of federal aid to upbuild the American merchant fleet. The shipping board is sharply divided on the problem of private or public operation of the present shipping lines. A thorough investigation of the whole subject by congress is expected.

POLITICAL LINEUP IS CLOSEST SINCE 1911

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—(UP)—A closer alignment of the two major political parties than at any time since 1919 is registered in the new 70th congress which today assumes legislative control of the nation.

The line up of the senate:
Republicans 48.
Democrats 47.
Farmer-Labor 1.
The line up of the house:
Republicans 237.
Democrats 195.
Farmer-Labor 2.
Socialist 1.

THE SENTINELS OF THE SCIOTO TRAIL.

(A plea for living things.)
We have watched the timid doe and fawn,
Steal forth at daybreak's earliest dawn
We have watched the redskin warrior glide,
Adown Scioto's crystal tide.
And many a council fire has glowed,
Beneath our limbs, beside this road.
But we were spared!

The paleface came, with gun and dog
And blazed his trail, through wood and bog.
Then came canals, with ropes and mules,
Strange beasts to us; to man, his tools,
For he must strive and build a nation.
Such is the price of civilization!
Still we were spared!

Next laboring trains, their smoke-plumes show,
And wires flash message, row on row
Then comes a wondrous, crackling thing,
Called interurbans, as they swing.
Is there yet more, Oh Great Jehovah, pray?
Ah, yes! Man's greatest gift, a new highway!

May we be spared?
Now overhead the man-bird's road,
Where once we watched but eagles soar!
And here beneath our branches span,
The juggernauts of speed-crazed man,
Begrudge to us the living space,
We own by right of God's free grace!
So we must die!
Tiffin Gilmore.

Interesting contests and a program filled the evening, which lasted from eight until eleven-thirty o'clock. The first number on the program was the Christmas story, told by Rev. Mr. McElfresh. Then everyone joined in singing a Christmas Carol, and a trio, composed of Mrs. K. P. Reid, Mrs. Edwin Bach and Mrs. Christian Schwarz, sang two Christmas carols, "Silent Night," and "If Came Upon The Midnight Clear," with Mrs. Paul Reid as accompanist. Miss Blanche Heffner played a piano solo, and Mrs. Harry Griner accompanied Mrs. Binns, who offered two whistling solos.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorndcliffe

Accessories are Matters of Importance.

IN my travels around the shops I have been particularly interested in this season's accessories. It seems to me that they are of paramount importance to the smart costume, and although one must adhere strictly to simplicity, there are any number of novelties to delight the feminine heart which are in excellent taste.

Foremost in importance to the costume are shoes and gloves, and to these we add pocketbooks, for now the smart shops have bags and shoes to match. Gloves are generally slip-ons of French suede or in light shades, and ornamented glaze kid for luncheon and tea.

Shoes are in such wide variety that it is impossible to give more than an idea about them. Suede is very popular, both in black and colors; patent leather is used trimmed with fancy kid, while alligator and lizard are still worn. Most of the shoes are trimmed, but "fancy" shoes, except for evening, are out. If one's feet are good-looking one does not need fancy, and if one's feet are not good-looking, fancy only accentuates the fact. For evening, metal brocades, velvets, moires and metal cloths are used for slippers as well as satin, which should be confined to evening and house wear, for it is not good taste on the street.

Shoulder flowers which have been worn so much are still in vogue, but in many cases they have been replaced by bows or jeweled ornaments, and the other day I saw a cunning little feather butterfly, such as I have sketched here, that would make a very successful shoulder decoration.

On some of the simple sports frocks, collars, and cuffs are an added touch of chic. The collar shown here is a triple affair trimmed with buttons and having a tie of grosgrain ribbon with the same motif. The ribbon and the buttons are repeated on the cuffs, which is quite droll.

She little handkerchiefs of hand-embroidered linen or silk, or of printed materials, are delightful, and one has them in colors that

SOUND HABITS HELP IRREGULAR HEARTS

Worry and Overwork, as Well as Abuse of Liquor, Tobacco, Tea and Coffee, Frequent Causes of Disturbances.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

A PERFECT machine is smooth and regular in its running. If it is jerky, suddenly stopping and starting, or if it is noisy, you suspect trouble of course.

The perfect heart is regular in its pulsations, going steadily along, quite deliberate in its action. If the pulse drops a beat now and then, is painfully slow, or suddenly develops speed like a race-horse, the symptom deserves attention.

I do not mean by this that one of these happenings is a sign of something dangerous. It may be a passing thing and of no consequence whatever. Indeed, it may be a chronic and ever-present condition and yet be of little importance.

It is not at all uncommon to find a person in pretty good health who has considerable irregularity of the heart's action. The doctors give it a long, hard name—"arrhythmia." Of course, in simple language, this means nothing more than lack of rhythm.

It is not at all an uncommon thing to find that the pulse of young children and young adults, too, is quite irregular. As they grow older, the heart settles down to perfect regularity.

After a severe attack of one of the fevers, the heart's rhythm may be disturbed for a time. Great care must be taken after diphtheria and influenza. These diseases have a tendency to attack the heart muscle and to damage it seriously. The other fevers disturb the heart, but do it little real harm. The loss of rhythm is restored when recovery is complete.

Most of what we call the "functional irregularities" disappear as soon as the victim exercises vigorously. When I was a young doctor I was a United States pension examining surgeon. One of my associates on our board was a wonderful doctor. He knew more about the heart than any other physician I ever met.

The Examining Board met in my office on the third floor of the building. When we had an examining man with an irregular heart, my colleague would direct him to run down the stairs to the street and return at once.

It was surprising how many disturbed and irregular hearts would become steady as a clock after this rather strenuous exertion. Of course, seriously involved hearts would not be benefited by exercise. On the contrary, violent effort is likely to do harm. The irregularity may be greatly increased by it.

Dyspepsia, anemia, excessive nervousness, the abuse of liquor, tobacco, tea or coffee, overwork and overwork—these are among the causes of irregular action of the heart. Plenty of sleep and out-of-door life will help to restore health. Nothing is more important than the chewing of proper food with good teeth and leading the sort of life we call "sensible living."

Walsh Enraptured Over Georgia Tech's Great Football Eleven

SPORTS EXPERT BELIEVES TEAM AMONG LEADERS

Wonderful Showing Made By Southerners Against Traditional Rival.

By DAVIS J. WALSH
I. N. S. Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Georgia Tech is one of the best, if not the best football team in America today. This writer, who never knows what he is talking about anyhow, might as well make this crack as any other and in addition to that, he just can't help himself. After he saw Tech beat Georgia on Saturday, this unbeaten and untied Georgian team, he can come to no other conclusion. He had seen Notre Dame; he had seen the army and both are generally understood to be fair aggressors, but he had seen no blocking, he had seen no tackling in the line until he saw Tech beat Georgia.

I am afraid that we will have to revise all our judgments after a game such as Tech played two days ago. For example, we step ourselves out and pick all American teams and Tech merely had a fighting chance for this dishonorable mention for something. Today Tech can't miss having several candidates because Tech deserves all of them or both or several. Offhand I would name a certain Mr. Thomason who in running for a touchdown, showed a change of pace such as they credit to Jim Thorpe, Eddie Mahan and other immortals. I swear that if a man can do a thing like that once, he is good for a hundred return engagements. They either have "it" or they haven't and I'm afraid that Mr. Thomason is guilty, as charged.

I also liked the way Durant, not an automobile, just a quarterback, ran his team. He could have made mistakes but he didn't. The two tackles and Crowley played football such as I would demand if I were a head coach, and somehow, the boys have been able to resist getting me up to and including that point.

In comparison, we have the all-Americans from Georgia to consider. For example Georgia is understood to have employed two ends this year and the funny thing was that both of them were bad on Saturday.

Maybe I am making one of my several mistakes in declaring that they weren't good. Yet there was not an all-American team in the country which did not include either Nash or Shiver and I swear again, being profane by instinct and environment, that I saw a better end play football and his name is Crowley.

What I am driving at is this: that I am for discretion and ostent in the great popular rush to select all-American teams before the members thereof can possibly be determined.

That's All It Takes to Settle This Question of Real Smokes at 5c Per

Some men say it can't be done. Some men say it never could be done. Some men say it never will be done. Let them argue. The fact remains that a mild, fragrant cigar can be produced to sell for 5c.

There is such a cigar on sale today. A cigar that's been on the market for thirty years and is selling bigger than ever—at 5c. A cigar that cost more money for years. That is a finer smoke today than it ever was. It's mild, ripe tobacco. A cool, slow smoker. Full of aroma. Satisfying. It's got everything you have a right to expect in a higher-priced cigar.

Hard to believe? Here's the way to prove it, at a total cost of five cents. Ask for just one Havana Ribbon anywhere in town. You'll know the happy truth from the first draw. If you wonder how we do it, the answer is mass production. Production that runs into millions. Buy one Havana Ribbon today, and you'll buy a dozen tomorrow.

PAUL WANER IS CHOSEN PLAYER

Young Pittsburgh Outfielder Wins Distinction as Most Valuable Man to Team.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(UP)—Playing in his second season in the major leagues, Paul Waner, young Pittsburgh outfielder, has been awarded the prize as the most valuable player in the National League, John A. Heydler, president of the league, announced today.

The committee of baseball writers delegated to choose the prize player cast 72 out of a possible 80 points for Waner in the closest election contest that has been staged in the league. Frank Frisch, second baseman for the St. Louis Cardinals, was second with 66 points, and baseman, was third with 54 points. Rogers Hornsby, New York second

In 1924, the first year of the contest Dazzy Vance, Brooklyn pitcher won the prize. In 1925 Hornsby won it and last year Bob O'Farrell, St. Louis catcher was the winner.

The players who received votes this year were:

Waner, 72; Frisch, 66; Hornsby, 54; Charley Root, Chicago, 46; Travis Jackson, New York, 42; Lloyd Waner, Pittsburgh, 25; Pie Traynor, Pittsburgh, 18; Ray Kremer, Pittsburgh, 14; Gabby Hartnett, Chicago, 12; Red Lucas, Cincinnati, 10; Hack Wilson, Chicago, 9; Bill Terry, New York, 6; Jim Bottomley, St. Louis, 6; Bubbles Hargrave, Cincinnati, 6; Max Carey, Brooklyn, 3; Carmen Hill, Pittsburgh, 2; Jake May, Cincinnati, 6; Eddie Farrell, Boston, 4; Grover Alexander, St. Louis; Nully Grimes, New York, 4; Jess Petty, Brooklyn, 2; Cy Williams, Philadelphia, 6.

ITALIAN-BELGIAN CYCLISTS IN LEAD

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(INS)—Gaetano Belloni and Gerard Debaets, the Italian-Belgian combination, were leading the field in the six-day bike race at nine o'clock this morning. One lap behind them, four teams were tied for second place—the Faudet-Marcillac, Petri-Hill, Walker Beckman and Lands-Vannek combinations. The Bello-Zuchetti team led in points with 41.

At nine o'clock the leaders had covered 251 miles and 8 laps, as against the record of 278 miles and 2 laps. In the first hour, however, Belloni and Debaets covered 28 miles and 1 lap, breaking the record of 26 miles and 1 lap made by Kaiser and Cameron in 1915.

No spills marked the early going. A record crowd attended the opening and were rewarded by seeking an unusual number of laps stolen.

WILL CONTESTED

Heirs Take Exception to Paper Filed in Court.

Stanley B. Imler and others filed a civil action in common pleas court Monday against Schuyler Imler and others, to contest the will of Malinda Imler. The deceased resided in Salt-creek township, near the old Imler school house and was the owner of two valuable farms.

She died June 9, 1927, and a paper purporting to be her last will was probated July 19, 1927.

The will is dated November 8, 1920 and a codicil thereto is dated June 11, 1921.

A fight was made on the appointment of the executor, Schuyler Imler, by the heirs, but he was appointed.

The heirs now come into court and ask to have the will set aside claiming it is not the last will and testament and codicil of the decedent. I. F. Snyder represents the plaintiff.

THE MOST VALUABLE PLAYER AWARD

It was harder this year than ever before for the baseball writers committee to decide upon the most valuable player in the National League.

The award finally went to Paul Waner, fleet right fielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates, 1927 champions.

Few will dispute the choice of the youngster from Harrah, Oklahoma, as the most valuable to his team of all the season's stars although Frankie Frisch of the Cardinals, Rogers Hornsby of the Giants and Charley Root of the Cubs were not far behind.

The balloting was closer this year than on any previous occasion, Waner receiving 72 votes, Frisch, 66, Hornsby, 54, Root, 46, and others, including Travis Jackson and Grover Cleveland Alexander, considerable support.

Last year, for instance, Bob O'Farrell, who won the most valuable player award, received 79 votes, while Hughie Critz, second choice, was far behind with 60, and Ray Kremer, of Pittsburgh, the third man, was the recipient of but 32 votes.

Paul Waner was the most important cog in the machine which finally rattled into first place at the very finish of an exciting National League race. With his brother, Lloyd, he solved the outfield problem after the defection of "Kiki" Cuyler.

This was Waner's second full year in the majors, as he was purchased from San Francisco along with Hal Rhyne in 1925. For the two seasons he has hit well over .300, and his fielding has been of the aggressive "try-for-everything" type.

A ball players' ball player who can hit in a pinch or a world series as well as right through the long playing season, P. Waner joins a select company which includes O'Farrell, Hoernsby and Dazzy Vance, the Brooklyn pitcher.

The award, announced today, carries with it a present of $1,000 in gold from the National League.

SCHOOLS WIN IN DECISION OF TAX BODY

County Budget Commissions
Cannot Lower Levies Below
Legal Limit, Is Ruling.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 5.—The State Tax Commission has ruled that county budget commissions do not have the authority to reduce levies in school districts below the legal minimum of 4.85 mills. This is truly a victory for the schools of the state as the ruling of the commission is final and there is no appeal from it. The ruling, given in the appeal of a board of education from action of a county budget commission, follows: "The Commission holds that a budget commission of a county has no authority under a statute to modify or reduce the amount shown in the budget of a board of education for the purpose of meeting debt charges, nor can it reduce the amount asked for operating expenses below such a sum as would be produced by a rate of 2.20 mills. There is also a school levy of 2.65 mills placed on the duplicate by county auditors, which is required by law, bringing the legal minimum levy for school operating expenses to 4.85 mills.

The Capital City was host to several state conventions the past and present week including The Ohio Manufacturers' association, Ohio Implement Dealers, State Employees Beneficial association, Ohio and West Virginia Tent & Awning companies and the Knights of St. John and auxiliaries, the latter having over 2,500 members in attendance. Mr. Frank Schwab of Buffalo, N. Y., supreme president of the organization, delivering the principal address.

tension of the Ohio river road, the engineer's estimate being $2,231,456.02. The longest improvement will be on the Painesville-Ravenna highway, 6,076 miles, the estimate being $293,771.39. The total mileage in improvement is 15,428, exclusive of bridges.

The sixtieth annual session of the County Auditor's Association of Ohio was held in the Capital City Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, members being regaled with addresses by Chairman of Tax Commission John A. Cassidy, Attorney General Edward C. Turner, A. B. Peswipaugh of the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Quincy A. Davis and Senator John S. Edwards of the Ohio Tax Commission and E. F. Allen of the Ohio Society for Crippled Children. Problems arising in the administration of the county auditor's office were also discussed by various members in attendance at the convention.

Automobile license plates are now on sale in all Ohio cities and counties. Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown says there will be no extension of time beyond December 31st for the procuring of licenses. Persons attempting to drive their cars after that date, bearing old license numbers, will be at the mercy of local police authorities. Secretary Brown has been promised the most loyal co-operation on the part of police, particularly in larger cities. Secretary Brown states that there is no reason why the simple duty of procuring licenses in a thirty day period should not be easily accomplished, when an army of 1,500,000 Ohio voters can go to the polls in orderly procession and decide the issues of state and nation-wide importance in a single day. Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Chalmers R. Wilson has distributed a total of 1,600,000 license plates for the 1928 registration. Auditors are feeding the instructions to have their bills of sale and truck weight slips with them when they apply for their license. This avoids much of the trouble in former years and especially in the last rush hours for licenses. Permission to use new license tags on and after December 21st has been granted by Mr. Brown. This enables owners to change from the old to the new so that by December 31st they will be ready to go. This early date for use of the new licenses is an innovation and has caused some favorable comment.

"Duck!" cried Darcy, and said no more. The vision of eating duck had removed his power of speech.

The cook had opened a huge box and was rattling therein. He drew out a loaf of bread and cut slices from it. Again his head and shoulders disappeared in the box and more rattling ensued. Eadie decided that the cook was getting out gridirons, forks, and other tools for the proper preparation of steaks. The cook put something before him on the table and reached overhand for a cleaver. There was the sound of two sharp blows and the cook came over to the two men.

"Here, fellows," said he, "dig in."

In one hand he extended two slices of bread and in the other a small round object, a tin can with a red label, the top opened in a jagged triangle. Eadie took the can in stupefied amazement and looked into it. There was a mysterious mass of red and black therein, with bits of white bones and pieces of vertebra sticking out.

"What the h—l is this?" asked Eadie in a choking voice.

"Canned sammin," said the cook.

"But you're goin' to cook us a steak too, aren't you?" Eadie tried to wrench his mouth into a grin, but was unsuccessful.

"Cook a steak?" cried the cook. "Them steaks is for officers. I ain't puttin' out steaks to every bum that comes moonin' a handout. Here I give you a good feed of bread an' sammin an' you want steak too. If you don't want that sammin, give it back to me an' get to h—l out of my kitchen!"

Eadie drew back his hand and buried the can of salmon with all his might into the cook's chest. "Take your d—d goldfish!" said he. The cook staggered back a step and Darcy, leaping past Eadie, planted his fist on the cook's jaw. The cook went down with a thud. It is not considered the act of a gentleman to hit a man when he is down, much less kick him, yet it was Sergeant Eadie's foot that thumped against the prostrate cook's ribs. It was Darcy, however, who mounted upon the cook's frame and did a little double-time thereon with his hob-nails. The cook began to howl.

"Give me that goldfish, Darcy," said Eadie calmly. He reached out and took the can and as the cook struggled to his feet, calmly knocked him down again. "It's Sunday," said the sergeant, "and there aren't many people around. Hold his hands, Darcy." Eadie thereupon sat astride the cook's chest and while Darcy held the other's hands Eadie gagged the cook with a few handfuls of goldfish, and then proceeded to rub the rest of the contents of the can into the cook's hair, eyes and ears. This was quite painful, for army goldfish was full of bones, quite sharp and strong. The cook writhed. He made gargling sounds. Though he had been taken by surprise, he was no weakling and he succeeded in wrenching his hands free from Darcy at last.

"Let's be going," said the sergeant. Eadie realized that he and Darcy were weak from hospital and that their strength was furthermore undermined by lack of food so that once the cook got free he might make it interesting for them. The cook got to his feet, and wheezing and choking, coughed goldfish from his throat and dug it out of his eyes and ears. At last he could see and speak. A prolonged howl for help was his first act. Then he made for the table and seized a cleaver. Again he yelled and looked about for his antagonists. They had disappeared.

"Sons o' ———," gasped the cook. "They can't get outta town." He started for the house at the end of the court at a staggering run.

In the street on the other side of the wall, Eadie and Darcy ran heavily along. They turned down a street that led between garden walls, a back alley, unpatrolled. They stopped and listened, holding their gasping breaths. There was a distant clamor, a far-off howling, in the intervals of which the two could distinguish the words "Thieves! Hey, crooks! M. P.'s up!" "Let's get outta town," said Darcy. "I feel nervous here. We want to go to Toul, don't we? Well, let's find the road. Man, I feel better after passing that bird a beatin'." The idea of him puttin' out goldfish to a couple wounded guys back from hospital! I can do a heap o' walkin' to save myself a month or so on the rockpile."

They continued down the street to its end, and into the highroad that crossed there. There were some soldiers idling at the far end of the road, there was a restaurant with more soldiers sitting before it, but none of them showed any interest in the two strangers. Eadie went boldly up to one of the tables.

"Which is the road to Toul, fellows?" he asked.

"Heh?" said the men, "the road to Toul? Down the other side o' the town. It goes out by the M. P. barracks."

"How far is it?" asked Eadie.

"Twenty-five kilometers."

Eadie's heart sank. They could never make it before night. Twenty-five kilometers meant about fifteen miles, more than a day's march for him and his tired companion. He and Darcy went slowly away. They walked down a seemingly endless paved street, and came out on the edge of a meadow, on the far side of which was a long row of trees, stretching away out of sight to the northeast.

"I'll bet that's the road," said Eadie.

"It looks like a main road and it goes in the right direction."

They crossed the hot field, mopping their brows, and at last arrived at the edge of the road, sat and looked sidly at their new shoes. Those shoes were not yet broken in and hence made their feet sore.

"We're getting closer all the time," said Eadie. "We're bound to find the outfit some day."

"Yeh, some day," agreed Darcy. "When we were three or four hundred miles from the outfit it didn't seem half as far off as it does now when we ain't but ten or twelve. Here comes a motorcycle guy."

He pointed to a cloud of dust approaching from the direction of the town, in front of which could be seen the thin shape of a motorcycle with its rider.

The motorcycle approached, slowed down, and as Darcy stood up to hail its rider, the machine stopped. The rider was a large, husky soldier, a very capable looking gun swung from his hip, and his arm bore the blue brassard with two white letters, large and glaring—M. P.

"Oh, misery!" muttered Eadie. The halting of this policeman boded the wanderers no good. It would mean a request to be shown the authority for their wandering at large, and like Simple Simon, indeed they had not any. The military policeman approached.

"Are you the two guys that beat up the cook?" asked he.

"What cook?" countered Eadie. "The M. P. grinned. 'I ain't askin' officially,' said he, 'but just as one guy to another. That bird has been sufferin' for a rubbin' down for some time. Come clean, now, ain't you two the ones that slipped it to him? You answer the description, two tough guys, salvage uniforms, phony wound stripe, toughest one a sergeant.'"

"Well," said Eadie, "we had a few words with a guy back there—I don't know about his being a cook."

"He's a cook, all right," said the M. P. "He cooks for the big two-star boys that hang around corps headquarters. Tell me, is it true yuh knocked him down and kicked the liver out of him?"

"Somethin' like that," said Darcy. "He got us to chop up a cord o' wood an' said he'd give us a feed for it an' then he issued out a can o' goldfish."

"That's him," said the M. P. "He used to cook for our detail. Well, he got promoted to be cook for the corps mess an' we got all set to live off the fat o' the land. Why, we give him a blowout the night he left that set us back a month's pay apiece. So then about a week later, when he'd never come near us, a couple of us went up to pay him a call. He was sittin' in the shed pickin' away at what was left of a roast suckin' pig. Well, in two words, he didn't offer us none an' we asked for it, an' maybe said some hard words. What does he do but turn us in for botherin' him an' hangin' round his kitchen! An' on the charge sheet is indorsed by old Turk, keyface himself, 'Severe sentence.' We're still payin' the blind. By G—d!" cried the M. P., "lemme shake hands with you guys! He said you broke every bone in his body almost."

He shook hands violently with Darcy and Eadie. "Now then," said he, "you wanta get away from here. Listen, now, there's a ration truck goin' up to Toul in about ten minutes. I saw it loadin' when I come out. I'll curve back to town an' tell 'em to be on the lookout for yuh. Jump in an' stay outta sight. No one'll look for yuh in Toul."

He mounted his motorcycle, swung it about, and was gone. A few minutes later a truck came to a groning halt as the two wanderers waved their arms at it.

"You two the guys that beat up the cook?" called the driver.

"That's us," answered Eadie.

"Well, get in the back," directed the driver, "an holler when you're in."

The two boosted each other in over the tailgate, yelled to the driver, and away they went.

"Well, can you tie that?" asked Darcy. "Everyone in this county is our friend because we beat up the cook. He must have been mean as dogwood and twice as nasty."

"Boy," said Eadie, "when that M. P. shook hands with me I was more surprised than if Kaiser Bill himself had done it. Why, think of the drug he would have had with the general if he'd arrested the men that had banged the general's cook! I know one mess that will eat poor for a few weeks."

"Hey!" bellowed a voice from the front of the truck, "you birds hungry?"

"That's our middle name," answered Eadie. "We're always hungry."

"There's a case o' jam open and some bread in a bag there," yelled back the man. "Dig in."

The two opened the jam, helped themselves to a loaf of bread and ate heartily. Night fell, and it began to rain while they were still on the way.

The truck rattled on, the rain drove against the cover, they halted while the driver held conversation with unseen men, and they proceeded again. Traffic became thicker and Eadie could tell when they were at a crossroads by the free comment of the driver and his assistant and the faint, yet bitter replies of unseen soldiers.

"We're gettin' near the front," said Darcy, peering out the back. "These trucks are all runnin' without helms." (To Be Continued.)
